The Honorable William H. Webster
Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear Mr. Webster:

In 1985, the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) proposed to expand the facilities at its headquarters in Langley, Virginia. Citizens in neighboring communities were concerned about potential negative impacts the expansion would have on the area. I was involved in the establishment of a citizens advisory committee formed to address community concerns.

Today, the expansion project is for the most part completed and I want to commend the CIA employees who worked with the communities on this project. These employees did an outstanding job of working with residents to preserve and enhance the appearance of the area and to mitigate the impacts of increased traffic that the building expansion caused.

In particular, I want to commend [redacted] in the Office of Public Affairs; [redacted] in the Office of Logistics; [redacted] current director of the new building project; and [redacted] in the Congressional Liaison office. These employees "bent over backwards" to resolve a number of problems and I have appreciated their cooperation.

By working together the CIA and citizens were able to implement this project for the benefit of all concerned. Thank you for your help.
